The Glotfelty-Bender Farm is located off Mosser Road and consists of a house, barn, and several outbuildings.

The house is a two-story, gable-roofed dwelling built on a high stone basement. The facade points south and its first floor is covered bay a shed-roofed porch. The first floor of the north elevation is covered by a shed-roofed addition.

The house is covered with asbestos shingles. Under the facade porch the original German siding can be seen. The windows are 1/1 sash with no surrounds. The roof is covered with slate shingles. The house has a single exterior brick stove chimney on the east gable end. Under the porch the facade door is set into the central bay, while the east bay features a three-sided bay window. An addition has been built onto the west bay.

South of the house is a stone-lined spring. East of the house is a frame bank barn. The bank entrance points east and is flanked by modern silos.
